

How do atmospheric conditions affect this calling range?

Out on the savanna, it has been shown that environmental conditions follow a pretty regular diurnal cycle. Around evening a strong temperature inversion usually forms and doesn't dissipate until dawn. The greatest calling areas are achieved during the formation and dissolution of the nightly inversion, especially with cloudless and relatively undisturbed weather. Under such conditions it is