

For many years, zoos and circuses relied primarily on importation from the wild to sustain their captive population. In recent years, public opinion and the protection of Asian and African